

Star of David pattern reported on Canadian Queen Victoria Jubilee

The April 17 issue of the BNA Perforator, edited by Gary Douglas, poses a question about a Canadian Queen Victoria Jubilee issue with a Star of David perfin that looks remarkably similar to one known on U.S. stamps.

The illustration isn't terribly clear, but it looks like the Canadian pattern is different only in the third line of the pattern. The Canadian pattern has three holes. The one shown in the U.S. catalog (Des 33) has only two holes.

Is it possible that the U.S. and Canadian perfins are the same, with the U.S. stamp showing a broken perforator?

The U.S. pattern is unidentified in the catalog. Does anyone have a copy of the U.S. pattern on cover?

Does anyone have another copy of the perfin on a Canadian stamp so they can be compared more closely?

Let the editor know if you can help solve this border-crossing mystery.
